O R,

The Thanks of the Welsh Itinerants for their pretious New-years-gift, (being a Chain of blew Beads, above an hundred Lyes on a string) lately sent them, by their namelesse, trutblesse, and shamelesse Benefactor, wherein the Calumniators monstrous Draught is expunged, and Mr. Powell drawn out in his proper Colours.

To the Reader.

T is the duty of hearers to commend their Teachers: This moveth us to do our endeavour to clear, beloved, M. Pamel, from those Injuries and scandals, whereby either his Person or Ministry may become contemptible. Athanasius and Chrysostome were defended by their hearers, which sued even to Regall Thrones, for no greater Indulgences than the enjoyment of them and their labours. We also could no lesse than appear against evill men, (being so loudly called upon by their defaming clamours) wounding the truth (what they can) through the sides of the messengers thereof. These Children in the market are affected neither with piping nor mourning; he that is more milde and sedentary, shall be the mark of their disdain; a man of more activity and eminency the object of their envy: who rather than misse of a spot on his coat, will take the pains to be spatter it, so that whosoever is judged by mans judgement, shall be sure to be once under blame. If there be no occasion found against a just Daniel; it shall be yet studiously invented against him, concerning the love of his God. This common calamity we both take notice of and lament. There are three things produced, to calumniate and asperse our dear Brother; his Birth, his Education, his Worke, which if not looked upon by an evill eye, or through false mediums, would all dignifie and advantage, rather than defame or blemish him in the least. VVe can extract from these flowers more Honey, then the venemous defamer hath done poyson. As for his Birth (though we be no Heraulds yet) we take notice, that Gentlemen,

To the Reader.

of good rank, in the Counties of Salop and Radnor, and of the best in Montgomery shire, commonly salute him as their kinsman, which is sufficient to demonstrate that his descent is not impeachable; and that none but men of malevolent mindes can vilifie him on this account: We plead not this genealogy as the chief cognizance of his Reputation (approving of the Adversaries poetical quotation, Genus & proavos, & quæ nos fecimus ipsi vix ea nostra voca----- Unworthy men may have great Ancestors) but rather look upon his Linage of the chief house, Heaven. And for his Education (though from his childhood brought up as a scholar) we measure it not, by every dirty way he hath travelled, or foule Dunghill he hath trod upon; but by the endowments of his minde, as a man, a Christian, a Preacher: His dexterous faculties both natural and acquired, his scripture learning, and gifts of utterance, adorning those several capacities; If that saying be true, Bonus textarius est bonus Theologus, we may attest him to be none of the meanest: we chiefly prize his Nurture and proficiency under Christ. But lastly, we look upon his Work as a flower above all in his garden, for beauty, savour and medicinal vertue. He is an indefatigable labourer in the Harvest, preaching almost every day in one parish or other; (and twice or thrice a day often) he hath written severall books, none of which impeded one sermon. His Acceptation is more than ordinary, above many of his fellow-labourers in the Gospel; as appears by the numerous concourse of Auditors to his frequent Lectures, who are as unwearied in hearing as he in speaking. His successe also is answerable, who sees not his labours prosperous, who can blast that which the Lord blesteth, or dares vilifie what the king delights to honour? He

To the Reader.

He hath been no fruitlesse itinerant, but fully approved himself a workman that need not be ashamed, employed by the head of the Church Christ, to Convert, Comfort, Edifie many souls, to Reprove, Rebuke, Exhort all.

The Author of those Fables (what shall we call the work, we leave it rather to be deleated by his penitent tears, then charactered by our Inke) which intended M. Powell for their moral, looked upon him, as some do upon the Errata's of a curious piece, more than upon the well drawn, and comely parts; otherwise he might have seen in him much of the workmanship of God, which might have challenged his thankfulnesse, rather than such scurrilous contempt. The thing chiefly intended (Christian Reader) in the ensuing Vindication, which had sooner come forth, but that it was found almost a Sybillean task, to collect leaves at such a distance, as from the hands of several persons of credit, who were thought fit to be called upon to give an accompt of the particular truths, to the which their names are subscribed; is to keep alive in thy breast that sanctuary fire of brotherly love, which should ever continue toward good men, to be a right Prospective glasse to thine Eye, least at a distance thou mistake; least undeserved prejudice and disaffection may prevent the benefit of any soule by M. Powells savoury instructions, which ends have engaged us to subscribe our selves, as faithfull witnesses of thus much of his worth.

Though our dear Brother M. Powel (worthy of double Honour, for his labours in the Word and Doctrine) was minded to lye down in silence under the sligh-tings of some professors, and the great contradiction of sinners; with that resolution of patient Job. That he would take upon his shoulder the Book of his Adversaries writing, and bind it as a Crown to him, And though we were minded to put our hand upon our mouths, rather than contend with the ungodly, which multiply words without knowledge; yet finding our silence increasing the triumphant noises of many men, who say, with our tongues, we will prevail; Ah ha, so would we have it: The light shall be dark in his Tabernacles, and his Candle shall be put out with him.
The steps of his strength shall be straitned, and his own counsell shall cast him down; for he is cast into a net by his own feet, and he walketh upon a snare. When the just upright man is thus mocked of his neighbour, and laughed to scorn; when he is set up as the Butt to shoot at with sharp Arrows, even bitter words, Then, who can refrain himself from speaking? What shall be done unto thee, O thou false tongue? Should thy lyes make men to hold their peace, and when thou mockest, shall no man make thee ashamed? Though a conquering fire of zeal may come out of the Witnesses mouths, against that fire of Hell, which thou belchest forth, yet we would not for forget that blessed caution of the Wiseman: Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him. Nor that heavenly example of the Arch-Angel, who durst bring no ray-ling accusation against the contending Devill. But the faith given to the Saints (which we look upon as opposed in general, rather than any particular mans person, or doctrine) is to be contended for, and the cause of Zion not to be pleaded by holding our peace, we would avoid sin, both in speech on the one hand, and silence on the other. If we and our

Brethren

To the Reader.

Brethren had not opened our mouths to swallow up this floud which the Dragon had thus cast out of his mouth after the woman; The very earth would rise up in judgment against us. We can but desire thee (Christian) to look upon this reproach and tribulation as thine own Lot (though chiefly our Brothers at present) as the easiest triall, and sight of affliction, Seeing all that will live godly in Christ Jesus, must suffer persecution: Evill men, and seducers growing worse & worse, deceiving and being deceived. The fire of the tongue is nothing to that of the fagot, which thou must not dread if Christ should sent his Horses and Chariots of fire, to carry thee to Heaven. Thou must not turn back in thy journey thitherward, at the meeting with worse impediments then barking dogs, or foul wayes. The Disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his Lord. If they have called him Beelzebub, how much more shall they doe to them of his household? Such badges of Christ the King, are to be worn as none of the meanest Ensignes of honour. We can but admonish thee, that thou be not deceived, beware of reprobate silver, slips gilded over with a faire tincture; take heed of being gull'd out of the precious merchandizes of Truth and Wisdome, for trifles and fables, by the grand cheat Satan; who as he useth to transform himself into an Angel of light, so would he still put the foule Vizors of his infernal spirits upon the faces of the Angels of the Churches. As of old he prevailed to make them accounted mad-men, setters forth of new Doctrine, leaders of the Sect, every where spoken against, movers of sedition, and turners of the world upside down. To undeceive thee in these things, we would commend to thy view and search, the ensuing Discourse, as a true Glasse wherein thou mayest see something of the deformity of such, as would justifie the wicked for a reward, and take away the righteousnesse of the righteous from him, and also the true Physionomy of our Brother Powell.

his face shining with a lustre contracted from the presence of God in the Mount; yet covered too with a vaile of modest expressions. For whom, we hope, thou hast reserved this favour, at least, not to passe sentence against him, upon a private suggestion of this Demetrius, and his fellow Craftsmen, till there shall be Accusers face to face, and Deputies to impleade one another; may we not presume of better measure from thy hand than Heathens gave? Verily this comming down of the Dragon in so great rage, assures us that his time is but short; And though he should draw down the third part of the stars of heaven, with his poysonous taile; yet this is our Comfort, that the Elect shall either keep their garments undefiled, or be shortly purified and made white. The gates of Hell shall not prevaile against the Temple built upon the Rock. Now iniquity doth so abound, and the love of so many wax cold; Now the Fig-Trees do bud, we may say the summer is nigh at hand; And then the spots of the Lunary body of the Church, shall be done away; And the righteous shall shine as the sun in the kingdome of their father. In the mean time, it concernes us to appear in our Lords quarrell, for the Vindication of truth, with the rest of our brethren, who being members of Mr. Powells Congregation in Radnorshire, who have known him from his youth, and could afford thee an ample Attestation of our sweet experiences of his Worth, Grace, Godlinesse, double light of Doctrine and Works, which hath shined amongst us, to our no small refreshment; for which we glorifie our heavenly Father, referring thee to his ensuing Character, as a fuller narrative of our Conceptions and estimations of him, from which we shall no longer detain thee, but subscribe our selves (in the Name of the Congregation) the lovers and servants of Christ his Church and Truth.

Examen & Purgamen.

Mr. Vavasor Powels impartial Triall.

OR,

The Thanks of the Welsh Itinerants for their late
*New-years-gift.

WE have the blessed president of Original Truth, for our present Inquisition for inferior truth, who comes down to see and Gen. 18.21. know whether the sin of Sodom were according to the Outcry of it: and we see how little our Calumniator takes notice of that Pattern, who might have spared the casting of his sulphureous fire from hell upon Wales, had his Charity

* Cor.4.4.

* We have intelligence from a good hand that one Mr. Alexander Griffeth, a Minister ejected for scandal is found to be the author of the Pamphlet as he was of 2 or 3 former of the like kind, against Mr. Powel.

found but ten Righteous persons there: But it seems he rather chose the * God of this world for a copie of Hatred, Envie, Revenge, and false Accusation. Who indeed very prudently spared the prefixing of his name in the Frontispiece, seeing every consequent page of his Discourse presents his name, Lyer, (what if we had said * Alexander the Great Lier) together with his pedigree and descent from the Father of lies, who hath still propagated his kingdom with the spoils of truth, and got himself a partie by being a continual Lye-carrier, and makebate between God and man. But 'tis observable, how this grand Hocus-pocus, suffers his absurdities to be discovered, by setting novices to play tricks of Legerdemain, before they have gotten a handsome slight of hand; who like unskillfull Alchymists, spoil all by over-firing the work, and so are never able to get the Philosophers Stone, to turn their Copper principles or practises into Gold; or like young Jesuits, and Emis-saries from the See of Rome, who now adays over acting their parts in Saint-like disguises, betray the Catholick Design. He hath befool'd himself, in drawing out this raw Pupil on the Stage, to encounter the strong Fencing master Truth, and so many of his skill'd sticklers. You may beleieve his word, that no weapon formed against him shall prosper, but like darts cast against Heaven, reflect upon the pate of him that casts them. We can but bemoan the distemper of the man, betrayed by his unreasonable absurdities, in giving such incongruous names to persons and things, Calling evil good, and good evil; putting darkness for light, and light for darkness; bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter: and drawing such Inconsequent Conclusions from his premised falsities, as that he should be able to blast Mr. Powels reputation, or proceedings, among good or rational men by so irrational nonsense; and therefore commend him to the Master of Bethlem Hospital's charity to search for him, and to try whether he can restore him to his wits and senses.

Whereas it is a plain evidence, that Verity is amongst us, when the hell hoard Falsbood thus spends upon it, with open mouth. Surely if we may judge of the Cause by the Effect, of the Sire, by the Whelp, we may look upon the Libel, as the best Encomium such a person could make, the summe totall of all his Items will be this, that Mr. Powel must needs be a Champion of the Lord of Hosts, against whom Satans Engineer levels so many shots. An Angel of Michaels, with whom the Dragon, or any of his angels conflict, a Son of Peace, with whom they have war: and so we can but thank the Libeller for this fair Reply to his own Charge, and this Traverse of his own Indictment. And we can but this while wonder, at the subtle Prince of darkness, so befool'd into fresh attempts, that hath been so often foil'd at his own weapon, and that so many of the brood of Gath should successively encounter David and his Worthies, seeing their Goliath slain by his own sword. What eminent work of God in any age hath he not oppugned? and that too in the laying of the foundation stones, so Nebemiah found

Isa. 54. 17.

Isa. 5. 20.

found it in his Temple-work. 'Tis his counsel to set upon Religion when it is weary and weak-handed, to fall upon the King of Saints, as soon as he hath set up his Standard; so Christ and his Apostles found it. He does as much fear the Congregating of Saints, by the sound of the Gospel-trumpet, as the Pope does a General Counsel, as a grand Conventicle dangerous to his Supremacy; so Luther found it.

And now the Ark cannot be brought home to Wales (which hath been long lost to many parts thereof, ever since their old Elis days the true Britton, Bishops) but he must set this sharp-tongu'd Michal (Reproach) to call them shameless vain fellows, that gird themselves to dance before it with all their might. Who knows not, that the most forward forefront Christians have ever born the main shock of his charge? 'Tis his word of Command to fight neither with small nor great, but those that have princely leading graces. Peter the most confident stickler for Christ must be seized by the strongest Devil; and courageous Paul assaulted by Ephesian Beasts, and be mued up by the persecuting friends, that once possess him. He must be casting most dirt, in that face, where he finds God hath powred most oyl. And does he still stick to his old method? Then is Mr. Powel engaged to his Antagonist, for honoring him thus with his contempt, and justifying him by his Accusations, pointing him out, for one of the most formidable heroical spirits in Christ's army. You may easily perceive how the wind stands, and from what point the violent blasts come; Christ hath made a forcible entry into the strong mans house, bound him, and many of his refractory servants, and turn'd out his Chaplains in Ordinary, and now, if among these losers, he can have no Solicitors, or Advocates to speak in his cause, he might (as the Spirit of God hath done) write dumb Dogs upon their backs. Wrath is cruel anger is outrageous: but who can stand before envie? (saith Solomon) If the wrath of man thus break out into dangerous frenzie, what will be the issue when the spiritual man (so called) is grown mad, and spiritual wickedness comes down from his high places with great rage? when the blowing up of the double Interests of evil men and spirits, enflames their double wrath; when to that old original antipathy, between the Womans and Serpents seed, there is additional fuel ministred, by fresh affronts and foils, then we may expect to meet them like Bears robbed of their whelps. However we have this advantage from the fury of the man, his Passions carry him so far beyond the bounds of Truth, and Reason, that his Rhetorick will rather bespatter, then purge his Cause among sober men. And verily this is all the hurt we wish him, that we could so handle our Harp strings, as to allay the fury of this evil spirit, though with adventuring the hazard of his worst javelins. We had rather take up Heraclitus Tears, then Democritus Laughter, to see the poore man put so many cheats upon himself.

* Inimicum abscisci vitam accipere est alterum.

Sen.

He intends * Revenge upon Mr. Powel, (though it were but a poore one, and unbecoming a Black-coat, though an ejected one, as we further finde him to be by the blackness of his tongue, to rail like a suppressed Alewife against the Justice, and cowardly to * shoot in secret, out of ambush.) But indeed he * revenges Mr. Powel sufficiently, and more then enough, upon himself, libelling more dexterously against himself, then against him; and instead of proving him the Metropolitan of the Itinerants, proves himself an Arch-metropolitan Liar, and hath lost preferment, by concealing himself; for might not the Pope have sent for him to have writ new Legends, or corrected the old, who hath such an Invention for the purpose, a Fancy over-reaching all the books of Knight Errantry, Metamorphosis, Rabbinnicall or Jesuitical Romanes ever yet extant. But Mr. Powels tenderness to souls is greater than to triumph in the mans sins; so see him write his own Dooms-day book, in which (without a penitent recantation) are recorded so many scores of lyes, against the day of his account, his own Pen being made a sufficient barr for Heaven gate against him, at the which no lyes enter, neither he that maketh or loveth a lye. Neither is his pretended Vindication of the present Government, less then a calumny; can such a man beautifie, or rather stain & blur the Frontispiece of it with his black lines? Certainly being rightly scann'd it will be found a * traducement of Authority, and fall within the compass of the late Ordinance for Treason; the issues of such mens brains, as that of the drunken heal h-quiffing blade's stomachs, will but leave a stinking vomit upon it's glory. Neither will this Mountebanks Balsam, be a more soveraign cure for the wounds and sores of his Countrey men and Comrades, the ejected Priests, seeing seeing Authority hath enough to * discover them, and what a lying spirit is gone out among those Prophets, let their Foreman speak for them all. But his main design being not onely to blast the blessed effectual Ministry of Mr. Powel, by hanging out a bugbear Table, whereon is drawn out a monstrous Portraiture (with his name to't) made up of fragments borrowed from severall strange creatures in Wales, that so he might cry:

* Ex pede Herculem ex ungue Leonem.

Spectatum admisci risum teneatis amici?

But chiefly to escandaize Religion, by putting sheep into woolves skins, and putting out the eyes of * Professors, that they may be brought forth, like Sampson, to make sport for uncircumcised Philistines; by making a stalking-horse of the Itinerants through which he may shoot at Commissioners, Parliament, Godliness, and Truth it self: see notwithstanding how poorely his Engin serves to batter the wals of Zion withall, when you have read over the Confutation of his Errors; where you may see it torn all to peices, by many faithfull hands; which thought good to strike in to * relieve Mr. Powel, beset with a crowd of scandals which upon first view making some shew, upon nearer approach, were found but a heard of Alexanders Apes which were suddenly lockt into a rout. And though himself were * contented to become a silenced Minister as to his own vindication, and to return no other Answer to the railing Shimei, but so let him curse: yet we finding the cause of Christ, and his disciples, so inseparably united, the Head sympathizing and suffering with the least and lowest member, seeing primitive, and derivative Truth, are so link'd, that we must buy and sell both together, seeing the quarrels of Christs Church, and so eminent a Pastor, are so palpably espoused: If our tongues should cleave to the roof of our mouths while we forget Jerusalem, our very silence would proclaim us Apostates; if we should not contend for the wels of salvation, out of which we have drawn the waters of life with joy, as much as the world does for their wels without water, we deserve to have them stoppt, or taken from us.

* Multis minuitur qui uni facit injuriam.

* Qui succurre perituro potest, cum non succurrit occidit.

* Quum magnorum virum est negligeri ledemem.

To be brief, we that appear as Mr. Powels Advocates in this cause, appeal to all wise and rational men (that have not given both ears to the Accuser, but have learnt of Alexander to keep one for the accused) not onely for costs and damages to Mr.

Powel,

Powel, but also for Criminal Judgment against this Malefactor (at least in the judicature of their mind:). And seeing poore New England natives, upon the first dawning of the Gospel upon them, imposed five shillings mulct upon every lye, by a Law; (surely if this prodigal tongue were among them, he would quickly spend his patrimony with riotous lying) The Persians and Indians of old condemned Lyars, to the loss of al honour, commerce, and speech; the Gymnosophists, and Chaldeans to dark-dungeon-solitariness; and the Egyptians to death it self; what deserves this Senti-mendax among Christian Englishmen? But as for those that through their inbred antipathy to goodness, and innocence, will not be beaten off their false scent, and such as deafned by prejudice follow their lowd Cry, we give them leave to run on till they tire themselves out of their follies. And as for sober Christians, we doubt not but they have a Law within them, that condemns no man before it hear him; for whose satisfaction chiefly, many Christians, have subscribed their names to the ensuing refutation of many particular untruths, that Out of the mouthes of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

Deut. 19.15.

James who (as we find in story) was the first founder of New-years-gifts, could not be more paganish then this our Strenator, who begins with a barbarous ransack of the graves of the dead, to defame the living, (like the Papists that took up John Wickeliff's bones to Mar yr them, for the disparaging of his Doct ine) contrary to the known Principles, and practices of Heathens: But leaving the Father (though we might characterize him, and according to the Law of England prosecute him, to have him attach'd, and made exemplary, for his false, and causeless Hue and Cry) to the discretion of Divine Justice; We shal only bring his illegitimate Bratt to the whipping Post.

First you see his skill in Herauldry, by the blazing of Master Powels Pedigree, no better then to his defamation, which the Gentleman Mr. Humphrey Jones of Poole, (so extol'd by himself, for Discretion. parts. godlines. pag: 10.) hath counter blaz'd out of his book of Herauldry: whose Letter to Mr. Powel, we thought meet to insert as followeth.

His comparison is odious, he speaks of Uilisses his Wife as confidently as if himself had been either her Eunuch, or servant, and witness of the measure of her chastitie, no wonder he takes things so upon trust from his Countrymen, when he can take them from the hands of fabulous Poets, which he may

We having been neer Neighbors to Mr: Vavasor Powels Father and Mother while they lived, can testify that they were honest Persons, and of good repute, living in an antient House, and Lands of their own Freehold, that neither his Mother, nor the Houses that she Inhabited were ever tainted with the least report of unchastity, or incivillity, that she was careful in keeping her Son at School, and that afterward he came to teach School with us at Lavair-waterdine, who was of a good conversation, very studious, and willing to do good.

Those blots we can take off with a wet finger, who were Neighbours too, and Schoollfellows of Mr: Vavasor Powel, we know him to have been brought up in several Schools, from his Childhood, which he very diligently, and successfully followed, never taken up with any other imployment; This his only Sister dyed some few dayes before his Father, when he was too young to improve any Games in her behalf, neither did he use any Games for his Mothers livelyhood, but she, (& an Uncle of his one Mr: Erasmus Powel of Glanne) maintained him in good fashion, till he was call'd to teach School which he did several years before he was Married.

Surely the mans appetite to, and good rellish of Wine, and strong drink made him thus strangely dream of a Tavern, and his frequent converse with such creatures, of the salutations of Drawers and Tapsters, welcome Gentlemen, which were no more used by Mr: Powel, then his Mistris notes.

He was so taken with sweet, and dear Mr: Quarrel, sometimes a walking Pedlar, and seller of hot-waters in Presteigne, &c. Pam. p. 2.

1. No sooner becomes he a Schoolmaster, but takes upon him the habit of Sir John.

Vind.

The untruth whereof appears by the foregoing Certificate, which shews how he continued in the single imployment of a Schoolmaster several years together.

2. Borrowed of a decayed Minister his Letters of Orders. 3. Razeth out the other, and inserts his own Name. 4. Under colour of the Letters missive he goes unsent. 5. For his Non-conformity, &c. his calling was questioned. 6. The Orders being well scan'd, were found spurious, &c. 7. He bound to appear at the next great Sessions. 8. Was with much ado Repriev'd from the Gallows, &c.

We who were heretofore Officers belonging to the Court of the great Sessions of the County of Radnor, were present at, and imployed in the Sessions at Presteign, in the year of our Ld. 1642. when Mr: Vava for Powel was questioned by way of Indictment, (among others) for non-conformity, do know assuredly that he was not Indicted upon the said Bil, neither was there any thing mentioned in the said Bill, about the forging of Orders, or preaching of seditious Doctrine, which we testifie Francis Richards then Clerk of the Indictments.

Peter Taylour Attorney in the Sessions

Judge Ramsay then one of the Judges there, Mr: Gibs, and Mr: Powel Counsellors at Law, and Mr: Hugh Protonotary can justifie the same, and that Mr: Powel was invited to Dinner with the Judges the last day of the Assizes, notwithstanding the High Sheriff, (who was Mr: Powels Kinsman, and Alias-man) did then prosecute against him; and that he had very great encouragement from the said Judges. But this extrajudicial Censurer, would now usurp the Offices both of Judge, and Jury, to revive, and find the Bil of Indictment, and unworthily condemn him for that, of which he is long ago discharged, what deserves then a take him Jaylor.

It was neither offence nor shame, that made Mr: Powel fly to England, but a malicious plot of the Commissioners of Array in Radnorshire, which did conspire to take away his life, for opposing

How cordially and venterously he carried himself at that time, is well known to Gen: Mytton, Coll: John Jones, Coll: Carter, Coll: Twizelton, and many others; and also in the North the last time the Scots came in is known to Coll: Saunders, and his Officers, who can give the Traducer the Lye in that particular. And we know that Mr. Powel came not into Wales upon any design of his own, nor for any self-advantage. partly by what we knew of his good accommodations, and free maintenance at Dartmouth in Kent; their love to him, and unwillingness to part with him, as also of the great offers he had elsewhere, but especially by the Letters which were sent by the Commissioners of Northwales, and the Church of Radnorshire, which ourselves were the bearers of, who made a journey to Kent purposely to bring him to Wales.

As for the name Demetrius which he would bestow on Mr. Powel, he had better kept it for himself, who appears as the grand stickler in the behalf of his fellow Craftsmen, who had their wealth, by their great goddesse Diana (the Common-Prayer Book) who seeing that Mr. Powel had perswaded and turned away much people, saying, that they are no gods, which are made with mens hands, so that not only their craft was in danger to be set at nought, but also the Temples of that their Goddesse to be despoiled, and her magnificence destroyed whom most of Wales worshipped, for the people in an uproar to cry, Great is the Common-Prayer-book of the Church of England, and to rush upon Mr. Powels companions in travel, as they did in many parts of Wales, especially Montgomeryshire the last Summer, to the endangering of many mens lives, by beating some out of their houses with stones, and wounding others with swords, Tucks and Clubs. As face answereth face, so do the hearts and hands, the principles and practises of these men answer those of the other.

It seems this Inquisitor hath received false Tickets both Vind. from North-Wales, and South-Wales, to make up his large sum of scandalizing Fables, for we who were Agents for Sequestration, and Receivers of the monies issuing from all the sequestred Tithes in the Counties of Brecon, and Radnor by vertue of the Act for the propagation of the Gospel in Wales, do witness that we never paid to Mr. Vavasor Powell, or any other for his use, directly, or indirectly, any monies at all, only the Commissioners intended him maintenance out of South-wales, till they were informed of his alliance elsewhere. There was indeed 20*l.* paid by order to some that were Probationers for the defraying of their charges in travelling to preach the Gospel in Brecknock, Carmarthen, and Cardigan shires with Mr. Powell, before any maintenance was settled upon them. But for Mr. Powell, we well know he never had a groat out of these Counties, or any part of South-wales, as appeareth by the account, given into the Committee of Parliament. *William Jones. For we being of the Itinerant Preachers, and Schoolmasters before spoken of, do bear Mr: Powel witness, that he never received either from us, or for us, any part or parcel of any of our salaries, but we had them from the hands of the Treasurer, or Agent, according to the Commissioners Orders, and wholly at our own disposal.

Though Mr: Powel was (by a former Pamphlet of the same forgers as we believe) reported to have bought 300 l. worth per annum, of Kings Revenues, yet Mr: Powel hath professed to us, that any of his Adversaries, that have the whole benefit of his purchase for 66 l per annum, which was paid for in the year 1649. before the receipt of any money, by force of the Act for propagation, as is well known to the Gentlemen who were the Contractors, particularly (to that faithful Gentleman) Coll: Taylor, who heard Mr: Powel expresse his chief end in dealing for that Revenue. viz: That he might preach the Gospel freely, and discharge the state of his salary, which he hath since made good, as is before proved. To make which purchase Mr: Powel sold his title in some Lands left him by his Father (though but a small Pittance, to what his Father, and Grandfather had made away from the antient Inheritance, both by sale, and Mortgage, and and was fain to sell much good Household stuff, and to take up some debts due to his Wife. And we are perswaded that he could save little or nothing of his yearly Sallary towards it, his expences have been so free, and large upon a Gospel account; thus you see how the Libellers tainten'd Lordships are thrunk in the wetting with our Ink, just so will the rest of the peice, his Lordship of Forgeries.

Alas 'tis a poor thing to carp at a smal living taken for years, a poor ruinous Country-house repaired, and a little augmented, the Landlord bearing the one half of the charge, by bargain, & Covenant, which we were present at, the whole charge (as we are given to understand, being near Neighbors) not amounting to 50 or 60 pounds at most; And we dare promise this malicious Accuser, that he shal have Mr: Powels bargain yet, upon the repaiment of his disbursements, having heard him often profess himself minded to relinquish it.

Pam. p. 4.

The great cabal of the Itinerants Instructions was to make the Ministers persons odious, and their Calling in its very basis Antichristian.

Vind.

The Itinerants know how to make distinctions between persons and sins, and did labour to make a separation between them by their doctrine, inviting the worst of Ministers, to come in to Christ, and to give testimony of their conversation, and Reformation, and they should be cheerfully embraced. Which when they would not hear, the taking away the fuel of their sins, was thought a good way to extinguish them, and to make their persons (not odious, but) acceptable to God and good men; but it seems the keeping of Æthiopians at a lowe diet avails not to make them change their hue. We doubt not but the Libeller goes a more effectual way to make himself and his fellows odious then ever the Itinerants did.

Pam. p. 4.

Eject them out of their Freeholds, and being without any respect either to their fidelity and ability in teaching, or sobriety in their conversations, &c. or turn Apostates to their Ordination.

Vind.

It appears by the fore-mentioned Jury of Ministers, whether this be true; and it will better appear hereafter by the publication of the depositions against the ejected Ministers, wherein it will be manifest, that Intemperance of conversation was the grand cause of their ejection. And that there was no necessity laid upon any to fall upon either of those two Rocks, to be wholly deprived of subsistence, or turn Apostates to their Ordination, is known to divers Ministers who were admitted into the Congregational societies in Wales, without any disclaiming of their Episcopal ordination.

Pam. p. 4. 5.

Though he and the Itinerants cried down Tithes, &c. yet he and they &c. have had the disposing of above forty thousand pound a year in Tithes, Gleaves, Improvements, &c.

Vind.

His He and they might here have been left out, who (as is before cleared) had neither the receiving nor disposing of a farthing but their own salaries, which they had out of the Treasury, according to the tenor of the Act. But though the Out-cryer look upon the Receipts and Incomes of that Treasury through the augmenting end of his Perspective, yet, he turns the diminishing end for others to see its large vent, & disbursements thorow. This stream (though not now so big as formerly when Tithes were higher rackt, & better payed for, then of late) is divided into many channels, w^{ch} he takes no notice of, as the

the hands of Itinerant Ministers, The Widows of deceased godly Ministers, The Wives of ejected Ministers, (who have a fifth part) The Commissioners, Treasurers, Agents, Clerks, (who had their convenient Salaries allowed them by the Act) The Collectors of Contributions, (which have at least the tenth of the Tithes) The Schoolmasters, (who are no less than twelve in this County of Mountgomery) and some honest hopeful University Scholars, have had a little; to convince you, that neither Commissioners, nor Itinerants, are enemies to Learning.

As yet to our Knowledge unaccounted for, &c.

Pam. p. 5.

It is sufficiently known, That the South Wales Commissioners Vind. have two years since given in a punctual account to the Committee of Parliament, appointed to receive it; and that those of North Wales have several times tendered their Accounts both to the Parliament and Council of State, which we doubt not will be satisfactory, when they shall be yet called for, and seen.

There are above seven hundred Parishes, in the thirteen Counties, unsupplied with any Ministers. Pam. p. 5.

There is his Multiplying Glass now; we desire to see this Multipliers Catalogue, Vind. for we cannot hear, that there were half so many Ministers ejected; but we are sure their places are not so unsupplied; for (in this County of Mountgomery, to speak within compass) we know no less than a dozen of Itinerants together with the Preaching Schoolmasters (which we could here nominate, were it needful,) besides the dozen of unejected Ministers before named, and at least two dozen of ejected Ministers who do yet Preach; and there is not fifty Parishes in the County. Compare now Preachers and Pulpits, and see how many are unsupplied.

And you may ride ten or twenty miles on the Lords day, where there is twenty Churches, and not one door opened, &c. Pam. p. 5.

We doubt not, but the absurd Relator may ride ten or twenty miles in many parts of Wales, and not see one Church; but if he will tell us, in what coasts thereof we may finde twenty Churches in twenty miles riding, Erit nobis magnus Apollo. Perhaps he can better inform us of so many Alehouses within such limits in some parts.

And for most of the Itinerants, they are such ignorant persons, that they can neither read, nor understand English. Pam. p. 5.

We are sure, the Major part of Teachers and Schoolmasters are University-men; we know but one that hath not perfect English, but he is a man of such excellently gifts, and dexterous faculty, in his own Language, that the Lord hath made him instrumental in the converting of divers Welsh people (which is more than any of the ejected Ministers can make appear they have succeeded in, though they have been often urged to it, with promises of restitution of their Living, if they could any of them produce one real Convert of theirs.) And we have heard some understanding Gentlemen, and those no friends of the Itinerants, affirm, They had much rather hear a Welsh Sermon from him, than from some Masters of Arts, professed Welsh Preachers; they were so far short of him in the true Idiom, and propriety of the Language.

Pam. p. 5.

Nay, some of them more scandalous than any of the ejected Ministers.

Vind.

They will not be so easily proved such, as the Accuser, and the rest of his Brethren were; but it is easie to say so, though we are confident, he knows none such, unless it be some of his ejected fraternity, who were for meer pity employed in teaching School, to get them a Livelihood. But as we say, It is a sorry bird that defiles his own nest.

Pam. p. 5.

And all of them, in their Principles and Doctrines, destructive to Government.

Vind.

The man is venturous still in judging of Principles, and private opinions, ere he be acquainted with the persons of men, and to judge of Doctrines that he never heard: For he must be an Itinerant General of Wales, to attend all the rest, if he speak knowingly of their Qualities, Parts, Principles, or Doctrines. Whether this be a truth or falshood, we appeal to Authority, which is already acquainted with some of our thoughts of Government.

It is more our part here, to return him a Mentiris Strenulator, who are frequent hearers of Mr. Powel, and finde the publication of that opinion, so far from being his chief work, that he never made it the subject of one whole Sermon among us, and doth very seldom, and then sparingly, touch upon it.

At Welshpool, &c. he taught, That Christ was to reign a thousand years upon the Earth, and that he was to sit next unto him, &c. Pam. p. 5.

We have been constant hearers of Mr. Powel in Pool, and never heard such an expression, as that he was to sit next unto Christ, Vind. come from him. If the Author repent not of such Relations, he may justly fear that coming of Christ to judgement, of which, he is one of the mockers.

At Llundetty, &c. he preached, That at London, a Girl of twelve years old, told her Mother she saw Christ in the Chamber, &c. Pam. p. 6.

We heard Mr. Powel there relate what he had heard from a precious Godly Minister of London, that a yong childe being in the Mothers arms, cryed out, Mother, Mother, I see Jesus Christ; whom the Godly Mother being not able to silence, brought to that Minister living in the house; and he asking, Where, and what manner of one is he? was answered, Tonder, and he is a white, white one. From whence, that good, sober man, conceived the child might have a vision. Hereby you may please to correct the Errata's of the former Relation. Jenkin Jones, William Watkins. Mr. Henry Jesty.

John Davis &c. told a Justice of Peace, &c. that he had seen Christ, and was to goe the next morning to see him again. Pam. p. 6.

We have heard John Davis professe he remembers no such word, though the expression be very justifiable as a Metaphor, for we see Christ in his Ordinances by Faith. If we had but the particular circumstances of place where, and persons to whom, this and the insuing story of Mr. Williams relate, we should more readily cashier them. Sed latet dolus in universalibus. But he makes us amends in the next. Vind.

At the same Town of Pool, Mr. Powel openly delivered before the Bailiff and the rest of the Corporation, that let them repent or not repent, both Priest and People were all damned. Pam. p. 6.

Mr. Powel was then answering to this Objection about Repentance. Tis true, most shall perish and be damned except they repent. Vind. Object shall all perish. It is a truth that most men will never repent, and so absolutely perish, repent or not repent it is sure the greatest part will be damned, according to Christs words, Luk. 13. 23. but except ye repent ye will be all damned; yet (saith he) let this be no discouragement to you to seek after repentance, for as many as truly repent shall be saved, This is the truth of the story; and as for those additionall expressions, Both Priest and People were all damned, we know them to be forgeries.

Nay saith he, Christ tels you, Luk. 13. 5. Except yee repent ye shall Ans.

Does not the Relator read of the repentance of Judas, and other Reprobates, which kept them not from damnation, but brought them to it, whereas true repentance is contradistinct, and not to be repented of? We beseech him to mark it.

son about the Spirits entering into his head, which appears to be a forgery, by the following Certificate under the Hand of an honest Gentleman, then Justice of Peace of that County.

These are to certify, That one Alexander Griffith (who was ejected out of the Vicaridge of Glasbury, for Drunkenness) did inform me, that one Richard Powel had preached blasphemy; he had fourteen days time given him to bring Witnesses before me to prove it: Which time expired, and no Witnesses came. Whereupon the Accuser was sent for, and threatned to be punished for his slandering of the said Preacher, except he made good his charge; Whereupon one David Jones was brought before me, and Henry Williams, Esq; (another Justice of Peace of our County) who being sworn, and examined what blasphemy he heard the said R. P. speak, answered, That two of his neighbors had told him, that he said, That the Spirit did enter into his head, as, &c. But that he did not hear him say any such words; though the said Mr. Gr. were present, and did endeavor to prompt him what to swear, but when he could not prevail, he was much ashamed; but such was the said Mr. Powels charity, That he was let pass with impunity for that scandal, and false charge: And that easie scape (it seems) hath made him return to his vomit. And further I can say in Mr. Richard Powels behalf, That though I was one of his next neighbors, I never heard that he went against Sir William Waller, (as is related) and I know that he doth not receive Tithes at all (though the Vicaridge of Glasbury was once settled upon him) and that he is an honest painful Preacher of the Gospel.

Thomas Watkins.

Qui alterum incusat probri, &c. O Sir, do you that so blamed Mr. Vavasor Powel, for Preaching you and your fellows out of your Free-holds, think thus to rail an honest man out of your late Vicaridge; as the Fox fouls the Badger out of his hole? you may be deceived.

Mr. V. P. to justify another sister of his own Congregation, which drowned her self in a Draw-well near to Welshpool, &c.

Vind.

There was indeed at Red-Castle, a Woman, who after child-bearing, being Feavourish and Light-headed (whether by reason of her distemper, or the violence of temptation, or both together) did cast her self into a Draw-well. And it was then (and still is) Mr. Powels charitable opinion, That she might be a Saint in Heaven, not-notwithstanding her death, her life was so holy, harmless, and undefiled with any known sins.

Thus far the truth goes; but it is not for the Pamphleters purpose, unless he may adde falsities to it. As that Mr. P. justified her self, that she was a sister of his Congregation, (who was one of the re-baptized people, which much differ from Mr. P. Judgement and Practice) That they who thought her not to be a Saint in Heaven, were wicked people and accursed; that she came to her end by the motion of the holy Spirit, &c. Which we that were present when Mr. Powel taught at the burial of the woman, know to be abominable untruths.

Ansbrose Moston, Lewis Price.

*At Llanervil, &c. he taught, That it were a good deed to cut Pam. p. 9.
the throats of all the old Ministers, &c.*

We have been present when ever Mr. Powel preached at Llaner-Vind. vil, and never heard from him such words, but rather the contrary; for we have often heard him say, He much pitied the ejected Ministers wives and children, and wished them all the Tithes for their good, might their husbands cease from deluding the people, and obstructing the progress of Religion; and as for the like following words (spoken to a private (nameless) Gentleman (which therefore we cannot otherwise disprove) Mr. Powel professeth before the Lord he never spake them.

- But what have we here next? a bundle of Lies, a sheaf of Arrows, which though bound together, we shall break at once.

*As (1) that he pretended, &c. That two and forty of the Pam. p. 9.
godly party were slain at the hearing of the ejected Ministers Sermons. (2) That since the dissolution of the former Parliament, he obtained a Commission, &c. (3) That he tyrannized over the Inhabitants of the Nation. (4) Carried himself insolently towards the High Sheriff. (5) Took Mr. Owens of Machynleth, &c. (6) Seized on Mr. Herbert of Dolegyog, &c.*

Mr. Powel professeth, That he never complained of the slaying Vind. of any of the godly party, but that they were in danger of their lives, we know very well; and that Mr. Powel had a Commission from the Lord General, bearing date about the time of the dissolution of the Parliament above named. That Mr. Powel did not shew the least insolency or incivility towards the said Sheriff; neither was Mr. Herbert of Dolegyog, or any ejected Ministers seized on by him:

him: But it is true, some of the said Mr. Owens, and Mr. Herberts servants, with others who had committed a riot in Machyn-leth (breaking the house where some godly people were at prayer, and beating them out with stones) and disobeyed the Justices Warrants, and beaten the Constables, Mr. P. was desired to assist those Officers with some of his listed men; which accordingly he did, apprehending some of the Rioters, and bringing them unhurt to the Justices of the Peace, who deservedly were by them bound to their good behaviour; neither were any of Mr. Powels Troop within Mr. Herberts dwelling-house, but onely an out-house: And though the Gentlewoman, great with childe, did miscarry, yet we hear she told the Widwife, and two other Gentlewomen, that that business was no cause of her untimely Labor, as indeed it needed not to be, her servant onely being apprehended; she continued well about a fortnight after.

And with these new raised Troops inforced the people to pay Tithes, as evidently appeareth in Mr. Ralph Kynastons case, whose Fields with his armed Troops he entred into, &c.

Mr. Ralph Kynaston, a violent Cavalier, was in the head of a great company of armed Countrey men, to oppose the Commonwealths Agent, and Farmers, in gathering the Tithes of Llandrinio, and Llandysilio (two Parishes in the County of Mountgomerie) in the behalf (as it seems) of his friend Dr. Griffith, from whom those pluralities were sequestred by the Commissioners for the Propagation, &c. in contempt of, and opposition to whose Orders, he stirred up the people to fight for their Tithes; which assembly, and enterprize, was quashed upon the approach of some listed men; but Mr. Powel was not amongst them. And the next day divers godly men being beaten and wounded (not far off the place of the former meeting) by a rude crew of Morris Dancers (whereof three were dangerously wounded, two with a Tuck, and one with a great Wall or Club) Mr. Powel with a few of his men did disarm some Papists, and Cavaliers thereabouts, and amongst the rest, the aforesaid Mr. Kynaston: Which we hope was no piece of dis-service to the Commonwealth.

*Mr. Powel acknowledgeth this for a truth, that seeing there Mr. Vind.
Alexander Griffith taking Notes, and hearing what work he was then upon, (viz. The publication of the Hue and Cry) he challenged him to make good there to his face, any thing that he had to al-themselves to the Saints, they should be in a short time all destroyed with the Sword; and that the War-horses should wade up to the Rayns of the Bridles in the blood of the said Parish-oners.*

*Possibly Mr. Powel might speak of, or allude to that prophecy, Vind.
(Rev. 14. 20.) The wine-press was trodden without the City, and blood came out of the wine-press, even to the horse-bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs: And it may be evident testimony of his unspeakable oppression, &c.*

A likely thing, that he being a Gentleman of that quality, could Vind. not have found bail for 100 l. had the Action been meerly Mr. Powels; but the truth is, Mr. Lloyd when he was Commissioner of Array, and High Sheriff of the County of Radnor, did drive away (or rather plunder) the Cattle of William ap John, Richard Griffith (and another) because they were Friends to the Parliament. After the War, the said Mr. Lloyd being in London, we sent to Mr. Powel (then there also) to demand satisfaction of the said Mr. Lloyd, for the said Cattle, which if he refused to give, we desired he might be sued, and to that purpose sent our Letter of Attourney to Master Powel: Upon a Reference of the business to Edward Ramsey, Esquire, he adwarded Mr. Lloyd to pay to Mr. Powel a hundred pound, which he entred in bond to do: Upon the forfeiture of which bond, we caused him to be arrested in Brecknock, whereupon he paid the moneys, but Mr. Powel had no hand in the Arrest, neither any share of the money, onely he did us this friendly courtesie.

Febr. 24.

Nay, such was Mr. Powel's charity to the said Mr. Lloyd, that though he had falsely imprisoned, and otherwise greatly injured him formerly, yet he freely forgave him those wrongs in our hearing, and yet behold, How he is requited evil for good, and his merciful deeds called Oppression.

John Williams, Richard Griffith.

And now behold, we are put to it, to receive the charge of a troop of Lies, which this their Muster-master brings up against Mr. Powel and his Troop, in a full body, which you shall see routed in a moment. We shall wave the high character given Mr. Humphrey Jones of Pool, in hopes of him for the future.

Pam. p. 10,

(1) He saith, Mr. Powel requested the Copies of some Reverend Divines, since ejected, that he might frame Articles against them. (2) That Mr. Powel took the said Mr. Jones his burning of those Notes in high contempt. (3) That Mr. Powel maliciously framed sixty Articles against him. (4) That Mr. Powel did by the mediation of friends agree with him. (5) That Mr. Powel produced several witnesses against him. (6) And among the rest one of his own Congregation. (7) That he fed him the whole week in Town with Venison. (8) That he instructed him for his purpose. (9) That the Honorable Judge checked Mr. Powel. (10) That Mr. Jones was vindicated in the face of the County. (11) That Mr. Powel was checked, &c.

Find.

For the three first of these particulars, Mr. Powel dare appeal to Mr. Jones himself, who (as we hear) doth utterly deny the giving out of such reports of the business. To the rest we can speak, who were present at the great Sessions at Pool, when a Sadler of the Town exhibited Articles of the behavior against the said Humphrey Jones, and he therefore put beside his Attorney-ship in the said Court, and fined by the Honorable Judge Mackworth for his swearing and drunkenness: To whom Mr. Powel was so favorable, that being called upon by the Judge to speak his knowledge, he answered (not before the second call) That he was unwilling to accuse any man, but that there was an honest man, if his Lordship pleased to examine him, (Pointing at one that saw Mr. Jones disordered,) that he had rather might speak in the business. Neither was the witness aforementioned (the man of Guilfield) ever any member of the Congregation in Montgomeryshire, or one that made any profession of that way; neither did Mr. Powel feed him, or converse with with him as is before related ; neither did the Judge then give Mr. Judge Mask-Powel the least check , but then did, and since hath, expressed much worth.

respect unto him.

Edward Price, Lewis Price, Esquires.

Ambrose Moston, James Williams.

In the next Scene enters the Dyer of New Town, who surely Pag. II.
hath feed this man (well versed in such matters) for his Council and Advocate, to whom he is beholding for putting so fair a Dye upon so foul a piece of business ; he calls her that was proved to be married to him, Whore and lewd woman ; the woman after married to him, contrary to the Law, an honest woman. Says, That upon the bare evidence of the wicked woman, the Dyer was convicted. And are not both Judge and Jury, beholding to him for that ? And affirms, The former wife to become one of Mr. Powels Congregation, and that Mr. Powel sides with the one party or other in every Lawsute and difference in these parts. Which three latter particulars to our knowledge, are very false suggestions.

Amb. Moston.

I could tell you, how he would have undermined a poor widow Pam. p. 12.
in New Town (called Widow Rose) from her house, &c. but that the goodness of her Landlord, who would not consent to his wicked motions, prevented his designs.

Because you have been so friendly, as to spare the relation of that Vind.
business, we shall impartially do it for you, having met with some Letters of her Landlord Sir John Price, Baronet, which seem pro-vidently preserved for the vindicating of Mr. Powel (or rather truth) from this false impeachment. We who were present when Master Powel, and Mr. Edward Clunne (Son-in-law to Sir John Price) came together to the Widow Rose of New Town, with Letters from Sir John Price, written by his own hand, one to Mr. Powel, another to Mr. Clunne, a third to Mr. Davis (a Tenant of Sir Johns) and a fourth to the Widow Rose, all of them requiring her to deliver up the house above mentioned to Mr. Vavasor Powel, which she was willing to do, upon consideration of repayment of her disbursements, which Mr. Powel counselled her to insist upon with her Landlord, before she delivered up possession of her house ; assuring her also, That he would never meddle with the said house, until her Landlord had fully satisfied her, yea, and afterwards, If she were desirous to continue there, she should have any part of the house.

House for her use. There were three Letters written by Sir John Price to Mr. Powel about this business ; all which we saw, and know to be his own hand-writing: In which Letters he expresseth very much affection to his Kinsman Mr. Powel, and his desires to have him there settled for the good of the Town: We refer the Contents hereof to Sir John Price himself, forbearing to insert the said Letters (though we have them by us) for brevity sake.

Pam. p. 12.

Lastly, for his malignancy, and Seditious inciting of the people against all subordinate Magistracy here on earth, under the King of Kings, Christ Jesus, &c.

Kind.

Wonderful! Here is strange news indeed ; that Mr. Powel should be a Malignant to subordinate Governors, who by his humble Addresses to Christ for them, and to them for Christ, his ready tongue, and martial hand, hath so fully exprest the faithfulness of his heart to them these many years. But how is this proved ?

Pam. p. 12.

His unsufferable expressions, for the supplanting, and undermining thereof, is a clear demonstration, That he is the firebrand and incendiary of the whole Nation.

Kind.

And what expressions are those ?

Pam. p. 12.

At Llandynam he publicly delivered, That he knew not who were the Keepers of the Liberties of England, &c.

Kind.

Truly Sir, a fair Demonstration, he did not know who were meant by the Keepers of the Liberties, Ergo, He is a Malignant, Seditious, a Firebrand, and Incendiary. Sic disputandum, negatur consequentia. Should we put the Riddle to your self, whether, the Parliament, the Counsel of State, the Keepers of the Great Seal, or the Army, were meant by the Keepers of the Liberties; or another Riddle concerning the Church of England, whether the power of the Keyes lie genuinely in the Bishops, or the Presbytery, or a Pastor, and his Congregation, and you could not readily and fully resolve them both, would you be content to be concluded an Adversary both to Church and State-Government?

By

By your Rule, he that is not compleatly versed in Politicks, can be no Loyal Subject. It is said, The Disciples as yet knew not the Scriptures, that Christ should rise from the dead: Will you John 20 9. infer, therefore they were enemies to Christ, all Judases? you have too much of the Sophister, too little of the Logician. It is no new thing, for Gods people to be charged with Sedition and Rebellion against Authority; but we must needs say, The Wheel See Ezra 14. 5. Acts 24 5. is strangely turned, when such men as Mr. Powel, and Mr. Jenkin Jones, are branded for Malignants, and disaffected persons, and such as your self accounted (either by your self, or others) well-affected Friends to Government.

But Master Vavasors unparalleled raptures at Christ Church, Pam. p. 13. &c.

In answering hereof, we should be loath to come so near the Vind. borders of Treason, as this busie body in others mens matters hath done, who rushes into the Chair of State, takes upon him to recriminate and condemn Mr. Powel, for what he was freely acquitted, and fully discharged by His Highness and His Honorable Council. He is at least a saucy subject, that take matters criminal out of the hand of the Supream Judges, censuring him whom they have freed.

He spared not His Highness, the Lord Protectors Person or Pam. p. 13. Government.

We conceive His Highness to be of that Christian disposition, Vind. that he better likes the wounds of a faithful friend, than the applause of an Enemy to Religion, and that he accepts the words of such a Remembrancer, rather than the Plea of so fabulous an Advocate, for his Government. And we leave the Censurer to spur this Question to his own Conscience, whether he dare venture so far as Mr. Powel did, in the best cause he can choose?

Mr. Vavasor, had you been a true Minister of Christ, &c. you Pam. p. 13. would have learned Christ far better.

So would you (Sir) have learned Christ better, had you been Vind. his true Minister; he never Libelled against any, but did good to them that persecuted and despightfully used him, and hath commanded all his to do the like. And truly, we are very sorry we have any necessity laid upon us, to reflect upon your person, which is not done out of malice (we can assure you) or for revengeful retaliation, but for the strengthening of our Cause, and the invalidating of yours; looking upon the rule of Agessilaus the Lacedemonian King, who when he heard any one discommended, would say, That he was as well to weigh the behaviour of him that spake, as his of whom he spoke. We had rather counsel you (as you doe Master Powel) that henceforth you would better remember the Ninth Commandement, and that God is not well pleased with those that deale falsly, or lye one to another; that Raylers shall not inherite the Kingdome of God; that all bitterness, and anger, and wrath, crying, and evil speakings, with all maliciousnesse is to be put away. Saint Augustine saith, the truth hath written this Principle in mens naturall hearts, Fac alteri quod tibi fieri velis, which seemes to be deleted out of yours; for though your advise here have a Christi-an appearance, yet your practise would fall under the lash of Hea-thens, for we finde Plato in his Common-wealth, greatly commen-ding the Lawes of Lydia, which punished Back-biters, as Mur-therers.

Observe moreover, how that in the Chapter which you cited, vers. 4. you are wished not to be wise above that which is writ-ten, &c.

The text is vers. 6. That yee might learne of us, not to think of men above that which is written; the meaning is, That they should not be foolish, (rather than wise, as you say) to judge more highly of men than they ought, which text makes not against, but for Mr. Powel, who thinkes so highly of no man, as that his interest is to be preferred above that of Christ, and therefore you say well, that none should by his vaine discourses, as you doe, adulterate the sense of the Scripture, ex ore tuo, &c.

It is you that reign as Kings, being full, and rich, &c. let us in-treat you to read that Scripture, Dan. 5. 25, 26, 27, &c.

Sir, we have read Dan. 5. over, and find there that Belshazzar was drinking wine with his Concubines, (playing the good Fel-low, as you terme it) when the fingers came forth of the wall and writ his doome; he was just in the posture that Propagation found you, and many of your Brethren in, but Mr. Powel is no member of your College, neither does any thing in the twenty fifth verse, &c. make against, but very much for him; Daniel, though he were the faithful Interpreter of that hard sentence upon a King, Mene, mene, &c. yet he suffered not the least penalty for it, but was much honou-red there for, cloathed with scarlet, &c. And we doubt not but our pious Rulers, that dismissed Mr. Powel upon so favourable termes, retaine respectfull thoughts of him for his well-meaning fidelity.

You are caught, you are caught (virus dum vomis ipse voret) Pam. p. 15.
 your place in Timothy, is 1 Tim. 3. 6. We must have the patience to read the words as you delivered them, with crying Victoria; not a Novice, lest being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the Devil, &c.

Sir, before you cry Victoria over Mr. Powel, from this one clause Vind. of the Chapter, you should take along with you the context, (like a grave Divine) you forget what went before. A Bishop must be blameless, &c. Vigilant, sober, of good conversation, &c. Not given to Wine, &c. Patient, no brawler, one that ruleth well his own house, &c. For if a man know not how to rule his own House, how shall he take care of the Church of God? And surely, he that hath learned all these lessons in the School of Christ, is No Novice. See upon a second view, whether the whole character agree more fully with Mr. Powel, or your self, or any other ejected Minister in Wales; and whether your defects in all, or some of these particulars, and the desires of the Commissioners to walk according to that Apostolical Rule, have not been the true grounds of your exclusion from the Offices of Presbyters and Deacons, who had too forwardly intruded into them, though most of you the veriest Novices that ever defamed those Callings; which if you had not been lift up with pride, conceiting your selves to be Lucifers, and bright morning Stars, (when indeed the light in you was but darkness) your fall had not now been so great as you account it, at the sides of the pit of your own mistakes: Neither had you fallen into this condemnation of the Devil, either by penary ejection, or wicked calumniation. You triumphed too soon, in the conceit that you had a twig to strike at Mr. Powel withal, not observing, that the whole Chapter is Christs whip of many small Cords, made purposely to drive you out of the Temple: The Devil had quickly enough of your kinde of quoting Scripture by incoherent fragments, and so we hope will you.

Extolling your selves above the true Ministers of Christ, as Pam. p. 14. Kings, they being imprisoned, despised, and ignominiously exposed to misery and scorn, &c.

And here we have you again complaining of the calumniating Vind. and traducing of the true Ministers of Christ Jesus; by which Page 16. we finde you mean your self, and your ejected Brethren. How true Ministers of Christ you were, may shortly appear, by the publication of your trials to the world: In the mean time, a little taste of such.

such unfavoury Salt, of such sour Grapes (which shal be given in answer to your false description of Propagation) may serve to cause all Christian people to spit you out of their mouthes, as the Lord hath spued you out of his.

Pam. p. 21. We know very well you would rather have dyed gloriously in the City of London, than to be ignominiously packed home into your owne Country, as you were.

Vind. How disagrees this man with himselfe, who in his Epistle (p. 2.) sayes, That Mr. Powel was ashamed to stay in London, that he betrayed his Brethrens trust, and violated his owne promise, &c. How could he be ashamed to stay, and yet chuse to dye gloriously there? We are sorry for the weaknesse of your memory, you are grown old it seemes, you spare us the labour when you give your selfe the Lye.

To give an account of Master Powels returne from London, I thought convenient, who was a knowing witnesse of his Doctrine, behaviour, trouble, and release, because some Country people are no wiser than to imagine the Pamphlet called the Hue and Cry, to be a reall thing, sent out after him by Authority, because he made some escape without a discharge from them, as is reported. Hee being examined before the Counsel a first and second time, spake very boldly and freely, confessing ingenuously more than was charged against him, and was dismissed; and being againe served to appear before the Counsel, by vertue only of a former Warrant, or Order, came before them, to whom they had little to say, but that he called the Court Messengers Catch-poles, and would have fixed another mans words upon him; which mistake he easily discovered, and so was freely, publickly, and honourably discharged, with promise of protection in his worke of the Gospel in Wales; and so he having twice publickly taken his leave of his godly friends, returned with me homeward, this is the truth of the story in briebe.

J. Williams.

Parr. But Mr. Powel is also charged with false Prophecies, as that Tyths should be no longer paid, that no enemy should henceforth appear in the Land, and that the Statues in White-Hall should be pulled downe by such a time, &c.

Vind. We are sure he gave us Predictions of many things, which accordingly hapned; as the successe of Col. Jones before Dublin, the Victory at Dunbar, the conquest of Anglesey by Gen. Mytton, and the overthrow of the Scots at Worcester, which he asserted in many many places, before and after he went out of Wales; now whether these things did proceed from a Prophetical Spirit, or a prudent foresight of consequences from premises, we shall not determine. But thus much we may assert, That the failing of Predictions in circumstance of time onely, does not prove them to be false Prophecies; for by that rule, Isaiah in speaking so positively of Hezekiah's sudden death; and Jonah of Ninivehs speedy destruction, should be put in the rank of false Prophets. Isa. 38. 1.

Jonah 3. 4.

But to satisfy all unbiassed Judges, I shall end with a story of Pam. your own invention, when you were in some part of Worcestershire, where some of the late Kings Levy lay in the field, you sent a Messenger over night to give you intelligence of the end of the battle; and being informed before you went to bed, that they were discomfitted, you wrote a Letter directed your self, discovering the truth, &c. manner of the fight, and delivered this Letter to your man, commanding him to take horse the next morning and ride three or four miles from the place you quartered, and to return with speed, and deliver the Letter unto you, as you came out of the Pulpit, being to preach there the next morning. In your Sermon you encouraged the people, assuring them, That it was revealed unto you that night, that the enemy should be destroyed, and wished them never to believe that you were a Prophet sent from the Lord, unless they should be very shortly certified thereof; yea, you hoped before you parted from that place. And true it is, your man met you at the Church door, and delivered unto you the Letter, being well instructed for the particulars thereof: But here was the mischance, your man mistaking your own, took anothers Horse, who being much abused by the wretched rider, discovered your cheat.

And so shall we this compleat Romance of yours (not Mr. Powels) vindicate your invention; we applaud your fancy, and faculty of Imagination, but not your judgement, in chusing a transaction for your purpose, which was beleagured with such a throng of witnesses; you are no Prophet we see (what ever Mr. Powel is,) but a strange dreamer of dreams: But who informed you of all these private circumstances, that must acquaint you of the place where Mr. Powel quartered, when the news of Worcester fight came to him, which was no part of Worcestershire, as you say, but Ludlow Town; where he upon the Lords day preceding that fight, foretold the routing of the Scots in his Sermon, as he had before done at Glocester, and other places; places; neither did Mr. Powel Preach at Ludlow the day immediately after the fight, but it was three days before; this we can attest, and the falsity of your whole story, who were then upon the place with Mr. Powel. Neither are you well informed, when you say Mr. Powel lost his money at Worcester, you should have said Warrington Bridge; but that you reel like a drunkard, and cannot tread one strait step in the way of truth, without some digression. It is just as true, That Mr. Powel and his Companions ran away at Worcester; whereas it is well known, that Mr. Powel being in the Rear, came the word of command, to Face about, when the enemy charged us in the Rear in the City; and afterwards we drew up in a Fallow-field by St. Johns, expecting the enemy, and resolving to receive him; and seeing he came not on, we marched away orderly towards Glocester, observing all the way, Rank and File, Van and Rear-guard: But we think (by this time) you will finde your Squadron of Figments, will not so well stand the field, being now put to a total rout.

Thus have we had a large Mels of Alexander Pottage, which howsoever (Reader) it may be nauseous to thy Stomack, being so ill concocted, yet we hope may have a good Physical operation upon Mr. Powel, and Caution him in point of vigilance and prudence, that henceforth no just occasion may be given to an accuser. And the Lord help us all, That we may have our conversation honest among these Gentiles, that whereas they speak against us as evil doers, they may by our good works, which they shall behold, glorifie God in the day of visitation.

We hope also that those who have been very curious and inquisitive, in prying into the misreports of other men, may be convinced of their credulity and lightness of belief, upon such rumors as these: And that they may hence learn to be more deliberate in their Judgements, more reserved in their Censures, and more charitable in their Opinions; To such we shall onely put up that Petition, which a Roman Knight did to Augustus Caesar, when he had cleared himself to him of false accusations given in against him, he besought him, That from thenceforth he would observe what should be charged against against any person of quality, whether it were done by good men and true. Gods Law forbids Judgement upon a single witness, though never so credible; those that have passed rash sentence, upon the word of such a nameless one as this, will be accountable to it. If our senses be so deceivable by slights of Art, how much more our depraved Judgements; unless we covet to be deluded, we must examine and try all Mediums, or we are inevitably befooled. We leave our selves and the Accuser, open to all unprejudiced and unbiassed men. If the Pagan King Darius, could punish Daniels false accusers with the Lyons Den, the Emperors Theodosius and Honorius enact Laws, that the Accuser failing to make good his charge, should undergo the penalty he would have brought the accused unto;

If false Suggestors were in old time burnt in the Fore-heads with an hot iron, whipped in the dayes of Titus, Vespasian, Nerva, and Trajan, and thrust out of the Empire by Domitian, Antoninus and Macrinus, which said, He that punished them not, encouraged them: We hope all honest men can do no less than transfer these hard Censures from Mr. Powel upon this his Antagonist, who is thus foiled with his own weapon, And in the Net which he bath privily laid for another, are his own feet taken.

other. Do we not see renowned Father Augustine doing penance, in so many sheets of his own Confessions, for his youthful wantonness? Waldus sequestered from the Sacra to be the Ghostly Father of so numerous and gracious an Off-spring as the Waldenses in France? Luther coming out of his Superstitious Cloyster, to vanquish so many Garisons, and over-run so many Territories of Antichrist? Nay, whoever shall take the pains to read over the Lives of those Centuries of Converts of our own, and other Nations, shall finde in the List-roll, Room left for Mr. Pewee's name. Who does thence collect what honor he hath received from the Lord, and what glory he is to return to him (which indeed is the spur to all his activity) that so soon delivered him as a Bird out of the snare of the Fowler, and hath given him strong Eagles wings to soar aloft, and ever since to keep out of the reach of those earthly snares: When that Phoenix for Wisdom and Greatness, Solomon, was no wiser than to tire himself in the search after mundane vanities, the eye of whose Soul, beheld not his madnets and folly, till age had be-dimmed his bodily eyes.

It is true, Mr. Pewee plaid the Trust in Christ's School, in his minority: neither is he now to be laimed for that, which long since cost him so many stripes and tears: Four or five years was the poor soul cast into the King of Saints Correction-House, under the hands of that hard Task-master, the spirit of bondage. All this while was he fed with bread of adversity, and with water of affliction, till the King of Glory returned again in peace. He came not into the Kingdom of Heaven, but through a fiery Purgatory; he was long in the School of the Law ere he came to the University of Christ. The sad experience of which School-masters severity, hath made him fearful to recommend any of his friends to him. All this while was God breaking him in his Furnace, that he might come forth sewer and refining him in the fire, that he might come out a bright Sun and Star. That with his Master Christ, being tempted him self, he might be able to succor them that are tempted. And now being rescued from the Gates of death and Hell, he calls to mind the Valley of dead bones his Native Country; and that he should not go with the Lawless Leapers only to hide up for himself, the spoils of Spiritual land, and rich spoils of the Red Syria out of his eye: but that he ought to communicate to hunger-plaining Israel. That he might comfort those which were in any trouble, 2 Cor. 1. 4. That the comfort wherewith he himself was comforted of the Lord in 14.

Lord; and being * converted might strengthen his Brethren. His affections to God and his * Countrey, were the wings that carried him thither, which he found steering a dangerous course between the Scylla of some pernicious Errors on the one hand, and the Charybdis of Hea:henism and Superstition on the other. Where he is welcomed by all Friends to the Parliament, whether morally civil, or truly religious people. The quickness of his Imagination, strength of his memory, fulness of his conceptions, variety of discourses, and readiness of utterance, challenging more than ordinary respect from the former, and the exemplariness of his piety, the tenderness of his affections, the forwardness of his zeal, the liveliness of his doctrine, and eminency of all his graces, endearing him to the later. Onely the Royalists hated him, because he never prophesied good concerning them, but evil, together with their Ghostly Fathers, that cryed up the Diana of their Old Liturgy, because they heard her preached down, and their livelihood, which came in by her shrines. Such men, by how much the greater their rage was, or is, against him, give the stronger testimony for him, that he is not of the world, which never hated, but is ever fond of her own brood. And now finding his Native soyl, all in rubbish, like the ruins of a Monastery, he saw there was no building upon the old rotten Foundation; and so onely taking up what choice stones he could finde fit for the work, he goes to hew more out of the Rocks, and to cut down and square the sturdy Oaks in the Mountains; which very undertaking, with so small assistance as he had at first, gives full evidence of the Faith, and Courage of the Man, seeing how many difficulties he was to encounter, seeing the people naturallized to sin, by long continuance, grown old in blindness and ignorance their Diseases even festered and gangreened, and their Quack-salvers, unskilful Surgeons, and Physicians of no value; the Priests snarling at every one that should come to visit their Patients, lest they should lose the profit of the cure. But the taste of the smal Cluster of Grapes (the handful of Saints) made him go on without fearing those sons of Anak, or their Cities walled up to Heaven. When indeed finding many of them Champions of Satan, Factors of Hell, Sticklers for Superstition, and Enemies to Reformation, he saw the necessity of following the steps of our Blessed Saviour, who having re-proved the abuse of Sacred things by the words of his mouth, does nevertheless finde it needful to use hands, and to get a scourge to drive these buyers and sellers out of the Temple. Which had they been been but as ingenuous as P. Adrian VI. might have acknowledged as Epidemical a Disease to lye at that time on the Welsh Priesthood, * as he on the Roman in his time, and a speedy Remedy behoveful for so desperate a Malady.

* Which is apparent in his Instructions to his Legat, for the Convention of Noremberg, 1525. which may thus, Dices nos ingenuine sciri quod Deus hanc persecutionem Ecclesia sua inferre permittit. propter peccata hominum, maxime Sacerdotum & Ecclesiae Pralatorum, &c. Propterea (ut ait Chrysost.) saluator noster, curans infirmum Civitatem Hierosolymam ingressus est prius Templum, ut peccata sacerdotum primo castigaret. Instar boni Medici, qui morbum à radice curat. Scimus in hanc sanctā sedē, aliquot jam annis, multa abominanda fuisse, abusus in spiritualibus, excessus in mandatis, & omnia denique in perversum mutata, &c. Sleid Com. l. 4 Let the Libelling Prolocutor of the Assembly of the ejected Welsh Divines, take this Looking Glass, to shew him his brazen face, that hath more impudency, and less ingenuity than a Pope. Was Rome then so bemired, and was Wales now spotless? It is not the wiping of the Ecclesiasticks mouths onely, that will make them clean.

Now might have been taken up with him that of the Prophet Isaiah, The whole head is sick, and the whole heart is faint, from the Crown of the head, &c. Wales therefore had need (at least) of some Pillula luis majoris, for the purging Cephalick humors, that the sight might be cleared. No marvell if so diligent a Bee as Mr. Powel, carried a sting to drive out such idle Drones, as lived upon the spoyl of that Honey that should be reserved for better Laborers; Who like a skill'd Gardiner, saw it was much better have the Coleworts removed, than the Vine marred. Neither was this done out of enmity to the Calling of the Ministry of Wales, but meerly to their sins, which appears both by Mr. Powels open Profession, in his Disputation with Dr. Griffith at New Chappel, viz. That he neither did, nor would oppose any godly Ministers Calling, whether it were from Presbytery, or Episcopacy: And also by the Practice of the severall Congregations in Denbeigh, Mounigomery, and Radnorshires, in the receiving of some Ministers into their Societies, meerly upon the account of godlineffe, without any disclaiming of their Episcopal Ordination. And what Design here was against Learning may be collected from the earnest suites that have been presented to both Universities, and by Mr. Powels personal Applications to Oxford, both publickly and privately to the Heads of Houses, and his prevayling with some Scholars, who have had kind entertainment in Wales, as also the fair Overtures that have been made to others of greatest eminency in in Learning, which have waded the employment. Probably such shun'd Wales, as the Grecians did the Philosophers Garden at Abdera, upon the sight of Anatomized Beasts. Whereas if they had but dealt with this Democritus, as did wise Pythagoras, viz. Discourfed and reasoned it out with him, they might have received so fair an account of his Deportment, that they might have taken up that Doctors Opinion of that supposed Mad-man, That setting aside some odde things of his Habit, and Behaviour, there was not a wiser man to be found. For we that had as deep Prejudices against him as any could, have been taught by experience this better Character of him, He is a man, in whose bodily temperature, the nobler Elements of Fire and Ayre have the predominancy, as the Rushing and mighty wind, and the Clovet-tongued Fire have in his mental Temperature, which carry him above earthly Interests towards his Celestial Center. He hath a Body of steel, made as of purpose for his never resting indefatigable Spirit, which might ere this have worn out many ordinary Cases, with his extraordinary motion, and agitation. His idle Sermon-lesse day, is his sick-day. His Labours are his Recreations, and there is no time more burthensome than while he is from under the burthen. He hath a Heart that

* fears none, but him that is to be feared for his Mercy; That loves none but Christ, and those that carry some price of his beauty, and yet that hates none but them that hate love it self, and in them too, rather their devillish vizer than their persons, for he doth often melt in private mourning, for those that have most enflamed Hearts against Christ and his People. His Head is not onely a Fountain of Tears, because men keep not Gods Law, but also a Conduit of Divine Instruction, teaching them how to keep it. His Tongue is the Pen of a ready Writer, which is so touched with a Coal from the Altar, that it knows no difference between rich and poor, mean and honourable. His Ears are sometimes open to those that come but with the Colours of Christ about them; but neither they nor his purse shut to the Poor and Needy, that will not onely dole out his silver to them, but what he hath in the name of the Lord to distribute to their penurious souls. His Hands shall be lift up against none, but such as appear to him to be Jorams or Abaziabs, nor stretched out to draw in any but good Jebonadabs into the Chariot of Aminadab. Timber for his zeal and tartness, and (we may boldly speak it) a Paul for his diligence. The Jews had not more ground to imagine of Christ, that he was one of the revived Prophets, than we to say, That the Spirit of those old Apostles is descended on him. It is the Mantle of the great Prophet, that is his Rayment; the Power and Spirit of him that is greater than Elias resteth on him, by which he is made instrumental in the doing of wonders, even the reviving of many a Shunamites son, many a dead soul. There are many servants of God in Wales, that can say of him (as Paul does of himself) that though they have many Teachers, yet they have not many Fathers in Christ. He hath been a daily Miner at the Works of Christ, about fourteen years; and we are confident, there is not this day in England, a Laborer of his time, that can shew more right Silver Oar of his own raising, than he hath gotten out of these Welsh Mines; witness his gathered Congregations in Montgomery and Radnor Shires (and of late in Cardiganshire) abounding with hopeful and visible Converts, to whose Ministry most in those Assemblies have acknowledged themselves to ow their blessed changes, who would be ready to attest the same unto the world, by annexing hereunto a List of their Names, were it thought necessary (besides what success the Lord gave him formerly in London, Kent, and other places, where there remains many living Monuments, of his powerful undecieving Ministry.) Now is that promise fulfilled amongst us That many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased; so that though of late years, when there was a Minister or Curate in every Parish, you might have ridden twenty miles, and not have met with a knowing Spiritual Christian, * yet now * Invidia loquitur non quod est, sed quod subest. there being scarce a Church door open in twenty miles upon the Land (if you will believe the Pamphleter) yet I know but few Parishes, wherein you may not finde some favoring Christians. And so the antecedent Promise in Daniel, remains yet to be accomplished, That they that turn many to Righteousness, shall shine as the Stars for ever and ever. If Hercules for his counterfeit Labors, could gain a Monument among the shining Constellations; what deserves Mr. Poyet (as from good men) that hath carried the flag from Episcoparians, Free-willens, Monstrous Ranters, and Demonaick Quakers? Me thinks our Presbyterian Brethren, should be engaged to him, for this opposing of Errors, Heresies, and Blasphemies, and not deal worse with him, than the Scribes and Pharisees with our Saviour who denied him not access to their Synagogues,

1 Thes. 5. 14.

Synagogues; though they were filled with envy towards him when they cryed: Behold, the World is gone after him. Yet he being above discouragements, is still striving to follow his Master, as near as may be, Going about continually to do good, and to heal every Soul-disease among the People. still laboring and endeavoring to cause the sleeping to awake, the deaf to hear, the blinde to see, the lame to walk, To comfort the feeble minded, and support the weak, as he is commanded. Many such good works is he still doing amongst us, and for which of these must he be thus stoned with scandals? Well, if it must be so, he must be content to follow him also without the Camp, bearing his reproach.

Thus hath the Detractor by his unworthy subtraction forced from us, the Addition of some few parcels of Mr. Powels worth, reserving a supply of the like fruit, to cast into the ballance, as he shall (according to his promise) cast in his leaden pieces. Mr. Powel hath golden grace enough, to answer, and counterpoize all his brasse. He is currant Coyn for the Temple Treasury, and let him but have his grains of allowance, which where lives he that needs not Disquiescere in terris, &c.

We shall conclude with a word to the enemies of Truth and Righteousness, that they would reflect an eye inward upon themselves, and see how their Passions destroy their Reason; that they would rather strive to come out of the rank of Beasts, into the order of Men, then expect that others should climb into the station, and perfection of heavenly Angels, while they dwell in Earthy Tabernacles; that they would not make over-much haste to trample upon Mr. Powel, as a Meteor fallen to the ground, but rather note him yet as a burning and shining light, bearing witness of that light. And to our honored Neighbors of the Brethren, that they, though fixed Stars themselves, would not dispise the Itinerant Lights, but confess rather, that both may be useful in the lower Region of the Church, as well as the upper Firmament; seeing both derive their Beams from the same bright Fountain. From them we hope, that though at the leaping of this Poysonous Wiper upon this Pauls hand (so lately escaped shipwrack) they may have hard thoughts of him; yet seeing the Worm thus shaken off without harm, they will not be worse then Barbarians, but alter their mindes.

And thus much to the Supream Authority of the Nation, That they would take care, that the Cause of Religion, which hath brought them to the Star, may not now be shut up under Nitchers that that they would not slight such small leaks of British reproach, but use means to stop them betimes, lest they swell up to their own Cabbins, and that they would not minister fuel to this Fire of the Tongue, but rather quench it betimes, lest it come too soon to their own houses; for it is able to set on fire the whole course of nature: Jam. 3.6. That they may know by whom they reign, and for whom they are to decree Justice; that as they have the name Gods, so they may own Gods Word, and say of the least of his little ones, He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of our eyes. Zech. 2.8.

And finally to the Lord, That he that hath purified the hearts, would also wash the faces, and annoint the heads of his people with the oyl of gladness; that he that hath written upon them the golden characters of his own new Name, would take off the stains of theirs; that they may still hasten out of Egypt, and not so much as a Dog be suffered to move his tongue at them; that they may be of one heart, to love one another, and of one tongue, to speak to, and for one another; that good Nehemiahs may prosper, and the mouths of Sanballats may be stopped; that his Temple may be rebuilt in its Primitive glory; that the voices of those that shout for joy, may be louder than the cries of those that mourn in Zion; and that he would shew himself as the glory of Israel his glory. Amen.

A Reply to the Libellers Satyrical Rythmes.

Propagation, as awaked out of sleep by his noise, thus speaks:

WHo calls? -- What's there? -- How now? Can't Propagation Tir'd with the service of the British Nation, Posting long o'r their numerous Hills, down lay
 Her head to gain strength for another day:
 Cannot she take a nap of Innocent sleep,
 But Rampant Rats this noise and stir must keep?
 O Sirs! --- What Sot hath all this vomit cast
 Upon my Cloaths, while I was sleeping fast?

Was't not some drunken Priest? Beyond all doubt;
He'd Article thus Propagation out.

Where's he, that would blast Propagations name,
(Who needs not blush) but hides his own for shame?

Most hopeful Modesty! Could he be found Blushing, or paleness might his face confound.

He can't me Slut, or idle Huswife call,
That rid my house of Rubbish, swept out all.

Good Huswives use to give a Wormwood Pill,
To swarms of Fleas that do their Chambers fill,

And with a fatal Smoke to purge the Moths
Which they finde spitefully eat out their Cloaths:

And wing down Spiders that i'th' Cobwebs lurk,
And was not all this Propagations work?

Alas poor Priests! Must Gospel fall with you?
As much as't by your rising Rose, and grew.

Which was, as by the Frosts in May, we know
The tender Buds of knotting fruit to grow:

Its gain by you was such as Blasting yeilds,
Or Mildew to the Trees, and new ear'd Fields,

Or does Religion suffer by this Wind
That blew away so many? So we find

Plagu'd Egypt, suffering by th' East wind that blew Away the Locusts, that devouring crew,

Wept it at parting with Frogs, Lice, or Flies,
So does your loss water Devotions eyes.

And the gain of clear light, restor'd to chase
Away Night, which kept sinners in their place.

That thicker, sadder darkness, which souls ne'er Felt, until they in utter darkness were.

Have you this reward of my mercy shown,
That in my latter days am milder grown?

I did not now put Levi's Sons to draw Their Swords upon their Brethren, which I saw

After the Devils pipe dance at the rise O'th' Golden Calf, true Worships obsequies.

Not now as heretofore at Kishan, slay
Baals Priests, permitting none to scape away.

Though to their Sacrifice, no fire was given,
Though they kept off the blessed Dew of Heaven.

And yet shall Jezebel profaneness say,
 She'll Sacrifice me for a sudden prey?
 Where is the furious Jehu now that makes Baals Temple, either Slaughter-house, or Jakes?
 Or where the Henry, that cashier's all Monks, Slighting all Forts of Fryers, and their Punks?
 Did then one Cromwel, give so brave a rout
 To Popish Priests, and think you to recruit Now by another, that against you hath Trodden so far his noble Name-sakes path?
 No, no; To's Principles you'll finde him true,
 A zealous Jehu 'gainst such things as you:
 That will be careful to search, and put oddes
 'Twixt false adorers, and those that are Gods;
 Nor shall from henceforth our Protector choose
 Not to binde Dragons, but to let them loose.
 False railing tongues shall have no quick release,
 But rather Bridles, keep their Writs of ease.
 Such Levites don't so good a Patron merit,
 Fill'd with their Puddle Ale, not with the Spirit.
 The Dregs whereof cast to the people, some More drunk, and swinish then themselves become;
 Such as are better skill'd, and rather choose
 To court their *Hostis*s, than Christs beauteous Spouse.
 That have known spurious Jesues to beget
 No Gospel-Babes, Spiritual Children, yet
 Such as had better luck, at Dice, Cocks, Bowls,
 Than th' Apostolike game, for winning Souls,
 Which their own Tythes, and Profits labor'd more
 To Inn, than to get Wheat into Christs floore.
 That Freewil-Offrings from the people gain'd,
 But gave them none, did what they were constrain'd,
Stewards that challenged a full allowance,
 But fed the Children with a poor bestowance,
 Dry scraps, and crusts, snatcht from some neighbors Table,
 (Decking their Sermons like the Daw i' th' Fable.)
 Such as can sell the Body of our Lord
 At cheaper rates, than Judas could afford.
 Two or three pence, as many as have paid,
 Have had him to their wicked hands betray'd:

Such as by an Instrument, call'd Common Prayer,
 Could get the wages of five pounds a year,
 By Churching, Wedding, Christning, of which some,
 The Long-coat, more than Black-coat might become.
 Say not that I, that snatcht away, am cruel,
 But your selves, that would keep your sinful fuel.
 The Devils powder, that your selves had blown
 Up, and more with you, had I let alone.

And (Gentle Reader) because this Poetaster shall not say we are yet in his debt for his medley Epitaph, bestowed on Mr. P. Itine- him in his own coyn.
